

History

Since 2003, Meds & Food for Kids (MFK) has saved the lives of over 30,000 children through the production and distribution of Medika Mamba (“peanut butter medicine” in Creole), an enriched peanut paste globally recognized as the most effective treatment for childhood malnutrition. By making our products and purchasing raw materials in Haiti, MFK also provides much needed stimulus to local markets and economies to help stop the cycle of poverty that causes the disease in the first place. In 2010, MFK became a member of Nuriset’s PlumpyField network, dedicated to improving access to innovative nutritional solutions meeting international quality standards through local production, close to the populations requiring them.

Mission Statement

Meds & Food for Kids (MFK) is dedicated to preventing and treating malnutrition in Haiti by producing and distributing nutritious Ready-to-Use Foods. By locating production in Haiti, using Haitian labor, and, where possible, Haitian ingredients, MFK also addresses some of the root causes of malnutrition - unemployment and poverty - by creating jobs, training professionals and sponsoring long-term agricultural development.

Programs & Services

Meds & Food for Kids (MFK) manufactures Medika Mamba in its Cap Haitien facility. We distribute our product to partner organizations throughout the country who run the clinics, hospitals, and orphanages that provide direct care to malnourished children. Medika Mamba is always distributed for free to families in need. MFK also works alongside Haitian peanut farmers to help increase the quantity and improve the quality of their yields. We offer advice, training, and needed inputs like seeds and fertilizer. Our activities are guided by peanut experts from the University of Georgia and other American universities.
