ZERO HUNGER: DOING WHAT WORKS

A Meds & Food For Kids Initiative

Thursday, September 24, 2026

Ending hunger isn't a dream,
it's a matter of doing what works.

In a world facing unprecedented levels of hunger and malnutrition, MFK is proving that smarter, locally driven solutions can save lives and build lasting change.

From treating over one million malnourished children to training thousands of Haitian farmers, MFK's model shows what's possible when aid empowers rather than replaces.

This annual event brings together global leaders, changemakers, and passionate supporters to celebrate progress, confront urgent challenges, and chart a better path forward.

2026 Panel Discussion

The Zero Hunger panel will lead a dialogue on long-term solutions for alleviating food insecurity worldwide.

The history of Haiti's efforts to feed the hungry will ground the conversation with specific, undeniable evidence.

This event takes place before an audience spanning diverse academic, business, donor, and political perspectives.

Panelists include:

Dianna Darsney de Salcedo,

director of global initiatives at the George Washington University Global Food Institute. She is a former senior official at USAID's Bureau of Humanitarian Affairs with direct experience designing and allocating global food aid programming.

Jamie Rhoads,

executive director of the Haiti Food Systems Alliance, with experience with food systems across multiple countries.

Chris Greene,

CEO of Meds & Food for Kids, which produces therapeutic food in Haiti using local ingredients, supply chains, and employment - a working proof of concept for the local production model.
